ACT I - SCENE I

SETTING: The interior of a negro church in the deep south. The church is very simple, as the congregation is very poor. The walls are white washed, the congregation sit on benches. Swinging coal oil lanterns light the church. The pulpit is set diagonally down left stage. The center aisle faces the audience, and runs up and back to the entrance, UR. There is a window set U.C. A wheezy harmonium is off to one side of the pulpit. Special chairs of the kitchen variety are on either side of the pulpit for the Deacons and elders' of the church. The pulpit consists of a platform, upon which is built a narrow rostrum which holds a time worn bible. Above the pulpit, within reach of the Pastor, but above his head, is a wooden cross. On the upstage side of the pulpit is the "Amen corner", consisting of a row of chairs for the more fervent members of the congregation. It is twilight. As the action of the scene progresses, it darkens into night. When the scene opens the Pastor is seated at the back of the pulpit, waiting for a song to be completed.

AT RISE: Before the curtain rises we hear a spiritual, rising, and falling. It begins low and rises to full as curtain rises, continuing for about a minute after curtain rises, continuing for about a minute after curtain is up. At end of spiritual the pastor who has been seated advances to the front of the pulpit.

(A Ram's horn is blown. The congregation turns toward the door. Four men come down the aisle of the church carrying on their shoulders a rough kitchen table. On the table is a crudely made horn of plenty. Surrounding this, is every kind of farm produce the country affords. Among the offerings is a chicken in a coop. Topping all of this are large sun flower stalks that nod and bob as the men advance down the aisle. The church is full of Amens and Hallulujahs People kiss one another, shake hands-- etc. Someone starts a song in which everyone joins. The song is lively, almost the tempo of a march. During the song the Pastor, concerned with the excellence of the offering, impatiently peeps into them to see what he has gotten. Toward the end of the song we see that he has discovered that something is definitely wrong.
When the song finishes he mounts the pulpit)

Pastor

a gentle push toward the door. Jericho starts up the aisle. He walks as if he is dazed by the tremendous emotion around him. The congregation starts a song of exaltation. The Pastor falls on his knees in prayer.)

Pastor
Oh Lawd— hep mah son in 'is quest. Delivuh his enemies

(A little man in the throes of hysteria with a high voice. He grabs a swinging lantern from the church)
Oh mah Jesus— Ah'm gonna light 'is way!

(The songs swell as Jericho and the cripple slowly exit.)

Curtain
SETTING: During the first and second scenes the curtain is lowered while the scene is changed. During the change the spiritual of the preceding scene is continued. It diminishes in volume, until it is superseded by the music of a jazz band. The music from the dance hall. This builds as we begin to lose the spiritual, and it is mingled with shouts, laughter, snatches of song, etc. One is superimposed upon the other. There is no definite ending or beginning of either music. They flow into one another and become an integral part of the other. When the curtain rises we see the interior of a dance hall in the south. It is a low, barn-like structure with benches running around its wall. There is an entrance down right. A bar runs up right stage. There are tables set around the dance floor to accommodate those wealthier patrons who sit and drink. Open love making is going on, the band is playing a 'hot' number, and most of the couples are dancing. They dance for about a half minute and gradually work up stage, leaving a man and woman practically isolated. This couple engage in what is known as 'fancy strutting' until the girl finding her partner an obstacle, breaks away from him and begins to dance alone.

Girl
Sweet Poppah! Lemme hit it alone.

Man
(Patting his hands)
Dance it honey, dance' it.

Second Man
Looka dat 'ooman do dat nannygoat struggle!

(She glances toward the door, and sees Jericho entering with his bible held before him/ She screams, and tries to hide in the crowd.)

-17-
SETTING: THE FOLLOWING MORNING
SCENE: The same as scene 2. The dance hall is deserted, and in great disorder as if its occupants had left hurriedly. Tables are overturned, chairs and bottles lie about. It wears the general air of a tired, dispirited hoyden. The manager, HORACE WILLIAMS, is sitting with his legs astride a chair, leaning on it back. He is smoking a huge black cigar, and wears an air of thoughtful worry. He faces the audience. NOOTZIE, one of the natives, enters to him. He takes off his hat respectfully as he hesitantly comes to WILLIAMS. Williams doesn't turn his head at all, he just keeps puffing his cigar.

WILLIAMS
Well -- wad' yah find out?

ACT TWO

SCENE ONE

The living room of Jericho and Delilah's apartment in New York City some years later. The living room is furnished in a gaudy manner, denoting the lavish spending of money. There is a door down right, leading to the outer hall. Another back R. leads to the kitchen of the apartment. Down left, a door leading to the bedroom. There is a profusion of red--red lamp shades, red furniture, etc. The lamp shades all have elaborate and gaudily fringed shades.

AT RISE: CLOTILE, a friend of Horace Williams is discovered seated in a chair. Delilah strides nervously up and down the room, smoking cigarettes.

CLOTILE

Delilah
Why you?

Randall
(Moving closer to her)

Randall
(Moving closer to her)
All kinds. But nevah nuthin' so nice as you.

Randall
Look sugar, I'm crazy 'bout you. You know that, don't you? And you're crazy 'bout me-- I knows that. Now all we need is a stake. A real one. Then we can settle down. Take life easy. You kin quit this racketin' around with cheap prizefighters and break into the big time. You do love me don't you?

Delilah
You're right Randall. I'm crazy 'bout you. I ain't never loved nobody like you.

Randall
(Exultantly)

Delilah
You kin have me baby-- or anything I got.
(She breaks away from him)
But we got to be careful

CURTAIN
JERICHO
ACT 2  SCENE 3

TIME: Night

SCENE: The exterior of the general store in Jericho's home town. All that can be seen of the store is the porch, which runs back diagonally up left. Upright posts hold a sagging roof over the porch, a flight of wide steps leads to the porch. A dusty road winds up to, and past the steps. The scene is lit only by yellow, mellow light streaming from windows of the store, and a few oil lamps hung on the posts. At rise, we see a group of negroes about the store. Some of them loll about, others lean on posts, etc. One leans against the jam of the door. A small knot of them are clustered around a radio set, which emits squawks, music, etc.

Blue Gum
(To man fooling with radio)
Lemme see kin ah wuk duh thing!

Tom
(As radio plays some music)
Oh! Oh! yuh done got some music--

Joe
Hesh up, ole loud mouf an'

(The ANNOUNCER continues an undertone as the other characters comment)
-a fight that promises to be one of the most exciting battles ever staged in the East.

Announcer
The fifteen round bout between Jericho Tucker, pride of the South, and idol of Harlem, and Wildcat Thompson, that tearing, slashing, heavyweight from the plains. These two boys are right on edge. (It won't be long before the fight is under way) and (The men around the radio draw closer, the Pastor stands in the road an isolated figure)

Tom
Laud, ah sho hopes dat

buck on 'im.

Blue Gum
Doan worreh 'bout dat. Dat bucks ez good as in duh bank.

(The ANNOUNCER continuing) There's been very little betting on this fight because these boys are so evenly matched.
The Wildcat has looked better em in training than he has looked in his long career in the ring.

Announcer
I wish you could all see this sight.
are packed into this huge bowl--

Joe
Mah Gawd-- Dat shuah is eh mess
eh peopul!

Blue Gum
Hesh up, iggnunt, and let the man tawk.

(Announcer continuing in undertone)
They're crowded into every nook and corner of the place. Some of them have been here since before noon, struggling to get into this arena just to be with this promised all time classic of the squared ring.
Announcer

Little pin points of light can be seen stretching away into the darkness. Every now and then, far off there one flares up, and you know that a brother in the bleachers is lighting a cigarette. The ringside is filled with leaders from all walks of life. Stage, screen, radio and business stars are represented. The political life of the nation is sitting here. Party lines and ambitions forgotten in anticipation of this great fight.

(A roar from the crowd)

(The announcer's voice grows more excited)

The Wildcat just came into the ring. He looks great. We're waiting for Jericho now. The crowd is impatient, eager for it to begin.

(Another loud roar from the crowd)

Jericho is just climbing into the ring. He is followed by his manager Horace Williams, smoking his inevitable 'seeger.'

Blue Gum
Uh! Uh!

Joe
(Impatiently)
Hesh up, ole loud mouf'.

Announcer

The photographers are in the ring taking the boys' pictures. Just a minute, they're introducing someone. I'll switch you up to the ringside so you can get it.

(A far away voice cries, "Ladies and Gentlemen, the Heavyweight Champion of the World, K.O. Rothstein."

That was K.O. Rothstein, ladies and gentlemen, the champion of the world. The photographers have finished and they're clearing the ring. The referee is calling the boys to the center of the ring for final instructions. Jericho has just taken off a magnificent bathrobe all done in scarlet and white and he looks wonderful.

Pastor
(Beginning to pray)
Oh Lawd, help mah po' boy terright. Help him Lawd, cause his daddy ain' wid 'im, an' he needs yuh Lawd.

(Announcer continuing)

He looks like a man who knows he has a tough job ahead of him and is ready for it. The Wildcat is bracing himself against the ropes eagerly awaiting the bell that will send him forth to victory or defeat.

Announcer

Stand by now, the big fight is almost ready to begin.

Pastor
Help 'im Lawd; put strench in his arms, and courage in his hahahat. Ah wuz wrong Lawd tuh let 'im go wid anguh in his heart Lawd. He needs yuh Lawd, Doan

(Announcer continuing)

Wait a minute Jericho's manager is conferring with one of the judges who in turn is calling over Whitey Gordon the referee and the referee has just called time;
Pastor (continuing) fo' sake yuh son in his houh--

(Announcer continuing)
I imagine it has something to do with last minute adjustments of Jericho's fighting togs, and very shortly the fight will be---

Announcer
(With suppressed excitement in his voice)
Ladies and gentlemen! Jericho, that simple man from the South, is kneeling in his corner, his hands uplifted, praying to his God for victory!

Pastor
(In a louder voice)
Lif' 'is hän' Lawd, so dat he might smite duh philustine. You's in 'is hahat Lawd! He done yeered yuh call tuh 'im. Git in his ahms, Lawd. Lead 'im lak yuh led duh chillun of Izzel outta bondage intuh duh promise Lan'.

(Announcer continuing)
There is laughter in the bleachers.
This is a new sight to some of the ring crowd but the old timers are remembering the late Tiger Flowers.
Some of the fans are hooting, there is an impatient shuffling of feet, but Jericho kneels in his corner his arms outstretched in silent prayer. A stillness is stealing over the arena. The crowd realizes now by this man's earnestness that this is no publicity gag.

Announcer
This huge crowd is silent out of deference to this man's tremendous faith. Jericho, the man who knows that without God's help, his cause is lost, has cast a spell over this huge multitude. The crowd is hushed---silent---

Pastor
Give him yo' strenk, Lawd, hé callin' on yuh. Help him tuh win Lawd, and den, make him come on home tuh see 'is ole daddy. Ah's loneleh Lawd.
Loneluh in mah ole age. You's punished meh fo' mah pride in yuh, an' mah haughty ways an' luv' of yuh. Ah fo'got dat ah was duh shepéd' an' shudda led mah boyeh---

(Announcer continuing)
In the next few moments we will pause for station identification.
-------This is station WXXY of the Capitol Broadcasting Chain. We are bringing you this fight through the courtesy of the makers of that invincible champion of the road, the 1937 Biarritz special. The car that has the flash that is needed to make a champion, the endurance of a marathon runner and the speed of the 100 yard dash.-----Here we are back in the Bowl, ladies and gentlemen. Jericho is just rising from his communion with his God and the fight will be on in just a matter of seconds. The crowd is leaning forward as one man, waiting for the bell that will send these two men teating into each other like two devastating instruments of death.
Announcer
This is the most impressive thing I've ever seen. People way back in the twelfth row are talking in whispers. Listen closely. The only thing to be heard is the clatter of the pressmen's typewriters as they flash this great human story to their papers.
(We hear the excited, impatient clatter of telegraph keys and typewriters)

Pastor
Ah'm old, an' ah'm weareh. An' ah'll so'n be comin' home to yuh Lawd. Lemme see 'im befo' dat angul call. Lemme see 'im mah boy, Lawd Efo' dat trumpet blow.

(Thru the loudspeaker we hear the insistent clamoring of the bell, calling 'time' there is a mighty roar from the crowd. The announcer's voice grows more excited. The scene begins to black out, and house lights begin to come on, slowly)

Pastor
(Sinking to his knees)
Ouah fateth who art in heaben, hallowed by thy name. Thy kingdom come, thy will be done---

(Announcer continuing)
-And there's the bell! Both boys dash to the center of the ring. Jericho leads with a left. The Wildcat ducks. He's short with a right to the body. The Wildcat leads with a left. Jericho is in close, with short chopping blows to the jaw. He's following the Wildcat from pillar to post battering him mercilessly with those cruel jabbing lefts and rights to the body to the fact to the midsection.

He grapples with him and the men go down. Delilah looks on for a moment like a caged pantheress. Suddenly Jericho gets up, the gun is in his hands. He fires once. Randall sinks to the floor. Jericho looks at him dazedly)

Delilah

(Shrieking)
Randall! Randall! Oh my Gawd! Randall! Honey
(She rush... to him, he is lifeless. There is a growing murmur of voices in the hall. Jericho looks around helplessly for a moment. Then, throwing the pistol on the floor, quick-ly runs out the back way.)

CUR TAIN
ACT THREE SCENE TWO

The living room in the home of Pastor Tucker, in the south. Up back, right, is a door leading to a porch which faces the dusty road which winds past the house. Up back left, a window. Near the window is an old fashioned sideboard, containing a few cut glass trinkets. Down right is a door leading to the pastor's bedroom. Center stage there is a round table. On the table is an oil lamp and an old bible well worn. The walls are hung with colored lithographs of a religious nature. There is a calendar stuck up over the sideboard. Near the table is an old fashioned rocker. The time is dusk.

At Rise: Jericho is discovered alone, looking out of the window. After a moment, his father enters.
