Gentlemen:

EQ.

With Jim Grady abdicating and Ben Muse going into retreat, I have decided to become the visible flywheel for the Crier -- a most undemocratic decision, but I gather that if I were asked I probably would not accept the job.

Attached is a summary sheet on what we have funneled into print in recent months and what is planned for the next three issues. I must apologize for my rather unilateral decision on this near future copy---but I simply had to get stuff lined up before my next trip away to Puerto Rico (May 3-9).

Some of us in the past have promised to concoct TC articles and I would like those recalcitrant authors to come through by indicating their subject and estimated deadline and returning this sheet to me. Also, others may wish to jot in a personal topic--or one they could corral from a friend or neighbor.

I can identify some future topics:

- Vernon George has said he will write about the difference between designing a community center and a shopping center with obvious reference to Lake Anne Village & Hunter Woods
- Ed Sharp has promised us something profound and seminal on the grass roots aspects of self-government in a New Town
- Slater says he will work up a piece on higher education in Reston and its potential development
- Joan Watkins still must deliver her column on the loss of cultural verve in Reston
- Embry Rucker may produce something on his ideas on ecumenism
- we need stuff on crummy architecture, social planning in a New Town, innovations in local education, the success of heterogeneity in Reston residents, etc. etc.

Hopefully, I'll find my mailbox full of your good suggestions and commitments when I get back home on the 9th.

Cheerfully,

Slater
